

MODERN LUXURY

OCEAN DRIVE

MIRANDA KERR

july/august

features

70

LIFT OFF

As the world shifts in response to the pandemic, multihyphenate Miranda Kerr's perpetual positivity and uplifting manifesto redefine the new way to glow up.

76

CASTAWAY WITH ME

Slinky knits and crochet cover-ups made for slowing down and getting lost in the sun-basking days of summer

88

SONGS OF THE SUMMER

Kygo delivers an uplifting soundtrack for this year's unsettled season.

92

BLANK CANVAS

Taking care not to detract from the residence's panoramic Miami ocean views, interior designer and architect Phillip Thomas created a space focused on art and minimalism.

ON THE COVER
Photography: Russell James

Centering everything on the incredible Atlantic Ocean view, Phillip Thomas kept the interiors a minimalistic white. Opposite page: Every room in the apartment has a different view of the water.

PHOTOS BY KRIST TAVIBURELLO

BLANK CANVAS

Taking care not to detract from the residence's panoramic Miami ocean views, interior designer and architect Phillip Thomas created a space focused on art and minimalism.

BY KANIKA TALWAR

Proximity to water is everything in Miami. Phillip Thomas, no stranger to this fact, wanted to make the ocean the focal point of his apartment project in the new Richard Meier-designed tower of The Surf Club. To ensure that over-the-top colors and designs would not take away from the stunning view, Thomas took the concept of white-on-white to heart. Completely ignoring the building architect's original floor plan, Thomas and his client worked closely together in planning the layout of the apartment before the new Surf Club residential tower was even built. Thomas says he "reoriented the entire living space to take better advantage of the Atlantic views."

From left: Utilization of various alabaster shades continues throughout the interiors and into the master bedroom; the master bedroom's dressing room features a Jules Olitski painting and resin paneling.

Taking into consideration that his clients are serious contemporary art collectors, Thomas smartly placed accents of colorful art, such as Hervé Nys' "Gas Can Jerry" 9-foot-tall man sculpture crafted from red gas cans, throughout. Against the various frosty shades of furniture and flooring, other focal points include a blue coffee table by Yves Klein, Fredrikson Stallard cocktail tables and paintings by Polly Apfelbaum and Mike Cloud. Thomas custom-created sofas and sectionals for the space.

Throughout the interior spaces, Thomas used unconventional methods and materials to create a distinct space for his client. Thomas says he "tore down walls and covered the floors in epoxies creating a 'disco on the water' effect, even in the interior spaces such as the hall and bathrooms where shards of mirror were mixed with the resin coating to achieve the effect." The innovative technique required prior testing to ensure it would dry properly and achieved the desired results.

The minimalism and emphasis on art continue from the living room into the rest of the home. Breaking up the white mood, Thomas complemented the home with touches of silver in chairs, pillows, lighting and accessories to give definition to the space without detracting from the main centerpieces. Boffi cabinets and Miele appliances work together for a modern kitchen with KAWS

3D sculptures making their mark against the snowy palette. For ample seating on the day to day, the kitchen island has bar stools for a breakfast bar and an informal dining room; the main dining room boasts a circular alabaster acrylic lacquered table with gray chairs and seating for 10.

In the four bedrooms, California Closets, Jonathan Adler dressers and Bernhardt beds establish a getaway from the world after a long day. The master bedroom's dressing room features an abstract Jules Olitski painting, and resin paneling brings a nuanced touch to the space. Both the bedroom and dressing room continue the thematic white, along with silver accents on the dresser, side table and vanity table.

Having to turn the property over in less than three months and required to stay in Miami for several weeks, Thomas says the hard work was definitely worth it for the "sheer joy on the clients' part when they first walked into their home." With the primary objective of creating an exquisite home that soars above the saltwater, the architect-interior designer wanted to ensure a natural environment for casual living and formal entertaining. Because every room has an incredible view of the water, Thomas "let the backdrop of the Atlantic Ocean be celebrated—every room has glorious ocean views, so the natural beauty of the ocean and color of the water and sky has a strong presence." ■

DESIGN DETAILS

Catering to the serious art collector clients, Hervé Nys' "Gas Can Jerry" sculpture remains a focal point.

TYPE

Condominium

LOCATION

Surfside

ARCHITECTURE & INTERIOR DESIGN

Phillip Thomas Inc.
phillipthomasinc.com

BUILDER

Coble Builders
coblebuilders.com

RESOURCES

ARTWARE EDITIONS

Yves Klein blue coffee table
artwareeditions.com

BENJAMIN MOORE

Paint throughout benjaminmoore.com

BERNHARDT

Beds
bernhardt.com

BOFFI

Kitchen cabinets
boffi.com

CALIFORNIA CLOSETS

Bedroom closets
californiaclosets.com

DAVID GILL GALLERY

Fredrikson Stallard round coffee table
davidgillgallery.com

DORNBRACHT

Bathroom fixtures
dornbracht.com

FUSION FLOORS

Flooring throughout
fusionfloors.com

JONATHAN ADLER

Bedroom dressers
jonathanadler.com

LA REGENCE INC.

Custom window treatments
nylaregence.com

LUTRON

Motorized roller shades
lutron.com

MIELE

Kitchen appliances
mieleusa.com

STARK CARPET

Carpeting throughout
starkcarpet.com