

LUXURY

LUXURY MAGAZINE

FALL 2016

A MATTER OF CUSTOM

Personalized environments have never been more prized. Most furnishings companies now regularly offer multiple size and finish options for items in their collections. But these companies and artisans specialize in work replicated and refined from sketches dashed off by designers or adapted from expansive historical archives compiled over generations.

Kindel recently launched its Designer Artist Series, an extension of their "Create Something New" bespoke program, which fabricates original designs to exact specifications, such as Robyn Branch's Constant Credenza in a unique Striata finish with choice of painted lacquer. Kindel, kindelfurniture.com.

They made sofas for Obama's Oval Office—as well as pieces for Jacqueline Kennedy, Elsa Schiaparelli, and legions of decorators. Embroidering, welting, luggage stitching, tufting ... there's not an upholstery technique they haven't practiced since the 1920s. Jonas, jonasworkroom.com.

No two Angelina Kitchens are ever alike. Promemoria's design department builds from square one using options that include various hardwoods, bronze, Murano glass, leather, and specially developed client-specific finishes. Promemoria, promemoria.com.

If you've been in business since the 13th century, odds are you know what you're doing. That would be Barovier&Toso in Murano, which works with eminent designers on unique creations (L.A.-based James Magni designed this spectacular chandelier). Barovier&Toso, barovier.com.

Erhard Pfeiffer for the Barovier & Toso